

HONG KONG IS BADLY WRECKED

Loss To Shipping Is Immense And Can only Be Estimated as Yet---Later News.

MANY THOUSAND LIVES ARE LOST

Natives Suffered Very Much And Total Number of Dead Will Never Be Known as Wrecks are Strewn Along Coast.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Hongkong, Sept. 19.—The typhoon yesterday did most damage on the Kowloon peninsula. The losses are estimated at several million dollars. Over a thousand sampans and junks are missing from Hongkong alone. Twenty steamers and many launches are ashore and four steamers were damaged and the French destroyer Proton wrecked, and three petty officers and a seaman lost. The Sir William Jervois was sunk. The harbor is strewn with wreckage upon the shore. Several thousand Chinese water-dwellers must have perished. The losses of lives and property among the Chinese are appalling.
Latest Advice.
Manila, Sept. 19.—The latest advice from Hongkong state a thousand lives were lost in the typhoon and the damage to property will amount to millions of dollars. Twelve ships were sunk, twenty-four stranded and seven damaged. Half of the native craft in the port were sunk and the shipping trade is paralyzed.
The Typhoon.
Typhoon is the name that is applied to the hurricanes that visit the waters of eastern Asia. The word is of Arabic-Persian derivation, meaning to roar or cry out. From a meteorological point of view the typhoon is a special case of the so-called cyclonic storm. They usually originate far to the east and nearer to the equator than Manila. Generally they move to the west or west-northwest, but gradually curve so that they often pass northward or northeastward along the coasts of China and Japan. Typhoons usually are quite as severe as the average West Indian hurricanes. The barometer falls even lower at the center and the rainfall is heavier. Typhoons that occur in the summer and spring months recur more frequently than the winter storms, attain higher latitudes, and usually are very destructive in Japanese and adjacent waters. Some of these typhoons have been known to reach Bering Sea or the Aleutian Islands.
Former Storms.
Hurricane storms in foreign waters in recent years that resulted in great loss of life and property were as follows:
March 16-17, 1888—Apia, Samoa; six warships and ten other vessels lost, and 142 officers and men of the American and German navies drowned; many other persons perished.
October 16, 1902—Severe typhoon in Manila Bay; twenty-five lives lost.
Aug. 15, 1902—Fierce storm in the Gulf of Mexico.
Nov. 12-13, 1902—Storms in English waters; 180 lives lost.
Oct. 2, 1902—Typhoon at Ashio, Japan; 800 killed.
June 16, 1902—Kurrachee, India, swept by a tidal wave.
Sept. 29, 1902—Odawara, Japan; typhoon and tidal wave caused death of 600.

FORMER SPOUSE IS COOK FOR HIMSELF AND WIFE

Danville, Illinois, Merchant Has Peculiar Happiness Under One Roof---No Infelicity Evident.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Danville, Va., Sept. 19.—A man living with two women, to both of whom he has been lawfully wedded, and one of whom is divorced and employed by him as a cook in the household of the other, is a most astonishing situation which has been attracting much attention here.
W. V. Venable, a merchant of Danville, was a good many years ago married to Nannie Sizmore. Not many months ago he tired of life with his spouse and a divorce suit was entered, the result being that a decree was granted him. He, however, immediately employed his former wife as a domestic in his household. Soon afterward Venable met Mrs. Samuel Skipwith, a widow, is a teacher in one of the public schools, and becoming infatuated with this woman he decided to again become a benedict. Accordingly a proposal and acceptance followed. Preparations were then begun for the wedding, and the former wife of the prospective bridegroom was required to prepare the feast attendant upon the marriage of her former lord and consort to a woman who had succeeded her in his affections. She, however, made no protest against performing these duties, and with apparent willingness cooked the cakes and other delicacies required. According to reports the three are now living happily and contented under the same roof.

TO OPEN BIDS FOR 25,000 PANAMA CANAL COOLIES

Isthmian Commission Has Stipulated That Laborers Must Be Physically Capable And Trained For Work.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Washington, D. C., Sept. 19.—The Isthmian Canal Commission will tomorrow open bids to furnish Chinese labor for the construction of the Panama Canal. The basis for bidding is for 25,000 coolies. If the experiment of Chinese labor proves successful many thousands of coolies will be contracted for. With a recollection of the troubles that have arisen in South Africa, Australia and elsewhere from the employment of Chinese coolies, this government is taking every precaution to safeguard the selection of the coolies and to insure their proper treatment while working on the isthmus.
Laborers are desired from the southern provinces of China and such persons only will be accepted as have been accustomed to climatic and physical conditions as nearly similar as may be experienced in the Isthmus of Panama. No laborer will be accepted who has been brought from any part of the Hawaiian Islands. The laborers must be between twenty-one and forty-two years old and in good physical condition, accustomed to digging and earthwork. Foremen to the number of not less than one to each one hundred men, one physician to each 250 laborers, and one interpreter to each 500 laborers, together with the necessary number of cooks and barbers shall be furnished by the contractor. He shall also agree that neither slavery nor involuntary servitude shall be permitted with respect to any of the laborers and that they shall at all times receive just and humane treatment.
The Chinese laborers will be required to work ten hours each day. Overtime will be paid in excess of ten hours, and for all the work upon Sundays or holidays, at the rate of time and a half. Laborers coming under this contract will be provided free of charge with lodgings, fuel for cooking, burial grounds, necessary surgical and medical treatment. No wages will be paid to any laborer, however, during illness or absence from work. Families and children will be allowed to accompany the laborers in the proportion of 15 per cent of the total number of Chinese employed at any time.

AMERICAN BATTLESHIP EQUALS OF NEW MONSTERS

Newest Improvements In Design And Equipment Make United States Boats As Good As New English Vessel.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
New York, Sept. 19.—United States naval officers do not admit that the monster battleships planned by Great Britain and Italy are necessarily more effective than warships of the Connecticut-Louisiana and Michigan-South Carolina types. Now that fuller details have reached here regarding the Cuniberti battleship, with which Italy expects to outclass the Dreadnought, there is less disposition than ever to over-estimate the importance of Italy's move.
"On paper," a naval constructor attached to the Brooklyn yard, said, "both Great Britain and Italy will have ships greatly superior to anything in our navy. But all comparisons which take into consideration merely comparative displacement and battery strength are misleading. No one knows as yet how these monster warships will behave at sea. The Dreadnought went into commission only two weeks ago, and has never had a trial of any kind. And their effectiveness in action is in even greater doubt."
Moreover, the assumption that the biggest battleship can whip one of a few hundred tons smaller, leaves out of account the matter of seamanship, brains, courage, marksmanship, and relative efficiency. American warships may not be as big as the biggest, but in personnel and equipment they equal anything afloat.
This officer called attention to the employment of the 12-inch guns on the Connecticut, which has been so planned that they have a range of fire from dead ahead to a point well abeam. Another device that adds vastly to the safety of American warships is the arrangement for closing all the bulkhead doors in time of danger. From an emergency station on the bridge or in the pilot house all the doors below the water line can be closed almost instantly by what is known as the "Long Arm" system. Each door and the armor hatches have an electric motor, connected with the central station. In any emergency the ship can be rendered practically unsinkable in a few minutes by starting these motors and making the water-tight compartments so many life preservers. That it is no imaginary danger against which naval constructors are guarding, our warships by perfecting their bulkhead arrangements in this way, is shown by a long line of marine disasters, beginning with the loss of the Victoria and coming down to the Russo-Japanese war. Other powers are deeply interested in the "Long Arm" system, but for the present United States fighting ships alone have the advantage of the most effective means of safety devised since the water-tight bulkhead was introduced.
Our newest warships also have a steaming range of 5,000 miles, much greater than that of any other battleship afloat. This is a very important element in the fighting efficiency of all war vessels, and one in which the large English and Italian battleships are likely to fail.
Improved steering gear, better provision for handling ammunition and means of communication far in advance of anything heretofore perfected are additional advantages claimed for Uncle Sam's latest warships. On the Connecticut and Louisiana a complete telephone system is installed. In addition, private lines are run for the executive officer, navigator, chief engineer, surgeon, and electrical gunner. There are twenty-five extensions from the central station and seven private lines, in addition to 87 lines of voice pipes.

The new two-magazine Mergenthaler Linotype, mention of which was made a few weeks ago, gives increased capacity to the printing department. Four type faces can be set on this machine by the operator without change of magazines. It is especially fine for book, catalog, and various classes of work where body type is used extensively.

With its present equipment the printing department is capable of handling any class of printing and can guarantee as fine a grade of work as can be expected in the large cities.

Before The Footlights.

Of all the many attractions that visit us annually, none have a stronger hold upon theatre-goers than "York State Folks." It is easy to understand this. First it is the best of its kind on the road; secondly, Manager
Wright has never cheapened the cast, but offers every season the same great cast that originally presented the piece. No greater acting has been

Mr. Mace, in the matter of careers, was the incentive which caused each to cast his fortunes with the stage.
With one it was threatened poverty,
with the other love, or disappointed love. Dr. Mace received his degree of doctor of dental surgery from the Jefferson Medical School in the city of Philadelphia, in 1893, and the follow-

mon Peter Martin by James Lackaye, and Myron Cooper by Ray L. Royce.
Next season "York State Folks" will visit England, and the coming engagement will be the farewell appearance in this city prior to its foreign tour, and it is the intention of Manager Wright and the local management to make this engagement a notable one. The exact date will be announced shortly.

Fred Mace, leading comedian in Harry Askin's production of the Chicago long-run record breaker, "The ing year, after taking an extended course in the same school, was made an M. D. He was born in Philadelphia in 1873, and has a brother who is a practicing physician and another who will be graduated from the Jefferson school this spring. Dr. Mace settled in Erie, Pa., and practiced for two years and then suddenly left town. The cause—a fractured heart.

But that is another story.

Mr. Mace writes: "I was building up a good practice, and I believe if I had stayed I would now have been on the high road to success. But I wanted to get away, and the first thing I

SCENE IN "THE LION AND THE MOUSE," TO APPEAR HERE SOON

Umpire, though now an acrobat, made the long leap from tooth-pulling to musical comedy without a mishap and is now recognized as one of the funniest men on the other side of a bright song or a topical song. Mr. Mace was a dentist, a physician and a representative of a tooth-wash manufacturing house before he started out as a professional entertainer five years ago. Graduating from medical schools into theatrical high life is not an unprecedented occurrence, as Jesse Dan-son's did about the same thing. The chief difference between Mr. Mace and over again practicing dentistry. She wouldn't hear to it, but I went ahead, and now she's delighted and I'm still unmarried boy.

Mr. Mace's first engagement was with the Wilbur Opera company, in which he had a chorus part. He then played "Tweedle Deum" in "Floradora," and was next an understudy in the role of "The Chinese Honey-Lumpkin" in the "Piff Paff Pout."
moon, and later in "Piff Paff Pout."
Quite a successful success has been doubt, much of the success has been due to Mr. Mace's independence, without discounting his ability in the least.
When he joined the "Floradora" company he was promised a leading part by such a time and when the part was not coming forthwith, he left the company. He was given an understanding in New York that as soon as he would be promoted, when the company reached San Francisco, somebody changed his mind about the promotion.
Mr. Mace said "Good bye." An almost similar episode took place in connection with "The Piff Paff Pout" company. He joined the show in November, and was told that Eddie Foy was going to leave and that he would be given his place. However, the comical Eddie didn't leave, and Mr.

Mace said "Good bye," a second time in his short career. Two days later, just as the company was leaving town, Eddie took sick, strange as it may seem, and then the managers of the show hunted Mr. Mace up and said "Come," and he came. Mr. Mace has written several of the topical songs which he sings, and he devotes his leisure time to writing rhymes and songs. "That's Where My Money Goes," sometimes heard in vaudeville and variety shows, is one of his pieces, which he sold for $5.00. He and another University of Pennsylvania man are the authors of Penn's Variety song "Hurrah for the Red and Blue." He is no dreamer. He is not awed by the stage, and does not expect to awe anyone else by greatness of manner. A delicious and refreshing personality to find in the dressing room.

"The Umpire" will be presented at the Myers Grand Saturday, Sept. 22.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

Public sentiment has long been divided on the question of capital punishment, and as there is no national law on the subject the several states determine for themselves whether the crime of murder shall be punished by death or life imprisonment.

Many people regard the taking of life, either on the scaffold or in the electric chair, as a relic of barbarism, and so when a state decides against it—as has Wisconsin and a number of western states—it is congratulated by people who believe that the best interests of humanity are served.

Results, however, tell the story, and experience is demonstrating that the crime of murder is much more common in states which have abolished capital punishment.

Mob law also disrespects these states to greater or less extent. In the state of Iowa a criminal was taken from the justice court at Ottumwa a few years ago and strung up to a lamp-post.

The outrage occurred in the middle of the day and the streets were crowded with citizens. Not a word of protest was offered, but on every hand was heard the defence, "Justice is too slow in Iowa and the pardoning power renders the life sentence a burlesque."

It was stated that thirteen murders had been committed in the state during the year and the people felt warranted in taking the law into their own hands.

The state of Maine is much exercised just now over the prevalence of crime and, Eben Burnstead, secretary of the civic committee, is sending out a circular letter describing conditions and recommending the adoption of capital punishment as a remedy. He says in part:

"The state of Maine occupies a prominence by virtue of her natural resources and her laws. Her rugged sea coasts and pine forests produce a robustness of character for the upbuilding of the union, and her laws work out the good or the bad in the two vital principles of prohibition and of life imprisonment."

Maine's prosperous homes and multiplying savings banks encourage prohibition and local option. In other states, but the records of criminality demonstrate that life imprisonment is less humane than the penalty of death.

Casual newspaper reading in one month only of last year gave reports of five Maine towns stained by murder, and, in addition, a murderous assault and a suicide increased the number to seven. If this proportion continued through twelve months there would be recorded eighty-four homicides and murderous assaults. The same average in ten years would amount to 840 among 500,000 adult population.

"The cause is not difficult to find. It is not in the people themselves, for they are a noble, good hearted, stalwart folk."

"It is not in the conditions of life, for youth is reared under inspirations of climate and scenery that the world envies, livelihood is gained in vocations that tend to peace and righteousness and homes are established amid influences of education, temperance and religion.

"It is not in the immigration, for only 14 per cent is foreign born."

"As the cause of frequency of homicides is not found in the people or their environments it must be in the laws that were designed to prevent murder, and especially so since other states, under the death penalty law have fewer homicides in proportion to the population."

"Massachusetts with five times larger population made up of all races and temperaments largely foreign born with thousands carrying concealed weapons in overcrowded sections where tenement and factory conditions often breed strife, has comparatively little bloodshed. This is due to the threat in the death penalty law by which every man is warned that if he robs another of the right to exist he must forfeit his own life. Therefore few seek their own death by killing others."

"Life imprisonment, on the other hand, does not restrain men by a threat of a calamity equal to what the crime of murder brings upon the victim. Instead of being a deterrent before, it rather follows the crime as a punishment. It also is of uncertain severity, for in practice it is not so much imprisonment for life but for an indefinite term, which, owing to pardons, averages but a few years. For instance, of all the life prisoners during a half century in Rhode Island, there were only two unpardoned after an average of eleven years had been served in prison."

BRYAN AND THE SOUTH

"Not a ghost of a chance would Mr. Bryan have for the presidency without the support of the south," says the Louisville Herald. "Yet he deliberately sets at naught what he must know to be the fundamental belief of the south in the matter of government ownership of railways. Does he think that the southern white man is prepared to accept any and all doctrines he propounds without doubt or investigation? Does he think that the south is bound to him hand and foot, that he has but to command, the sort obey? Time, if such be his belief, for the south to assert herself."

The sentiment expressed by the Herald is the popular sentiment of the south and endorsed by the southern press, with scarcely a dissenting voice.

Should Mr. Bryan receive the nomination it means a campaign with a divided south and a new experience for the democratic party.

"A solid south" has long been the hope and pride of democracy, and the vote has been rounded up without effort, but Bryanism is not democracy and the intelligent people of the south have no use for the erratic reformer.

A large element of the old party in the north is also disgruntled and he will find it difficult to satisfy this element. In the meantime Hearst has created a party for himself in New York city and will make a good showing in his race for governor of the Empire state. He will not succeed, but he may come near enough to it to prove a dangerous rival for Bryan in 1908.

If the republican party is wise it will gain many new recruits from both the north and south.

The muck-rakers formerly in the employ of the McClures have bought the American Magazine. The announcement for the first number under the new management is out, and is devoted largely to exploiting the merits of "Dooley" and William Allen White. Those gentlemen are on the staff and are the only redeeming feature.

The steam railroads are not usually in favor of interurban lines and yet they are the coming great feeders of all trunk lines. They stimulate passenger travel and supply the farmer with freight privileges at his door. They have come to stay and every town can afford to encourage them.

It is estimated that $160,000,000 of American capital is invested in Cuba. The public utilities and much of the sugar and tobacco land is American property. This class of investments will be largely increased when the island becomes a part of the United States and it is only a matter of time when this will be done.

President Palma of Cuba is making a sad failure, because he does not appreciate the fact that he has a government behind him and full authority to quell riots and dispel mobs. He must create respect before he can command it, and this he is failing to do.

After the state fairs have all been held Chicago closes the program with an International Live Stock exposition commencing December 1st and continuing for eight days. Money is being freely expended to make the exposition better this year than ever before.

The best way to defeat the interurban franchise is to amend it. There are no vital objections offered and no good reason why the ordinance should not pass as published. It can be amended out of existence without much effort.

Every line of railroad that runs into a city is a benefit to it and should be encouraged by every citizen who cares anything about the welfare of the city. Janesville has an opportunity to secure another road without investing a dollar; why not have it?

Dowie claims to be a good business man and yet the receiver finds that Zion City is covered with liabilities of $6,000,000, with only one-third that amount of assets. He professed to be the Lord's steward, but he made a mighty poor one.

The next House of Representatives will be republican and from the present outlook President Roosevelt's successor will be Elihu Root. The party will make no mistake in nominating him.

If Janesville should double in population in ten years real estate would double in value, and yet there are people who are afraid that something of this kind will happen.

What's the matter with Janesville? Nothing, but a lack of ambition. Too many people are satisfied with present conditions and would regard it as a calamity if the town should grow.

The interurban road means improved transportation facilities for Janesville and better times for business men. Why not have it?

Here are some of them—the Danish paper is our authority for their correctness: The Chinaman says, "Ungal ni"; the Arab, "Ge sirem ez neb"; the Egyptian, "Nehabeek"; the Turk, "Sisi sevejerum"; and the Hindoo, "Main tu piar karva." But overwhelming is the declaration of love of an Eskimo, who tries to win the chosen one by the pleasant sound of the dainty little word, "Unividdsaaradthulalermajungnarssigujak."

Smith-Bradford

Milwaukee Free Press: Under the laws of Wisconsin if Mr. Bradford Smith prefers to be known as Mr. Smith-Bradford he is at liberty to make the change and cause it to be valid against all the world by expending half a dollar for the proper record. This being the case, what is the use of making a newspaper fuss about the matter when he does so? It isn't likely that his grandfather cares.

The Mother-in-Law

She is said to have had a difference with her mother-in-law, who resided with her, and because her husband's mother would not be reconciled she left her home in the early morning and jumped into the river.

Nipped in the Bud

Milwaukee Free Press: Congressman Weiss and two or three other Wisconsin democrats have been amusing themselves the past week with predictions of democratic success in the state elections this fall. The democratic party can never succeed in Wisconsin until it can convince the people that it stands for something tangible and is in possession of some prevailing aspirator looking to the welfare of the public.

Arkansas Revival

Milwaukee Free Press: An Arkansas man has sent a package of 5,000 copies of the Lord's prayer to the mayor of Chicago, with request for their distribution. It is doubtful whether this would be of much benefit to Chicago; but if it indicates correctly a general circulation of the prayer in Arkansas, it may be hoped that good will result. It was a citizen of that state who was said to have applied to a missionary endeavoring to impress him with the fortitude in death of the martyr Stephen: "Is he dead? I hadn't heard of his being sick."

The Poor Natives

South China Morning Post (Hongkong): The German East African panthers which arrived by the last mail contain the following announcement: The natives have contracted the vulgar habit of drinking soda water directly out of the bottles. Instead of pouring it first into a glass. In order to check this practice the government officials have issued a regulation to the effect that all natives discovered drinking out of bottles will be liable to be sentenced to severe corporal punishment or imprisonment; and Indian traders selling soda water and allowing it to be drunk under such unhygienic conditions will be liable to a heavy fine. The "Koenigsche Zeitung" says this is another example of official chicanery which tends to make the German dominion so hateful to natives.

ARTIFICIAL ICE IS POSSIBILITY

JANESVILLE BUSINESS MEN SAID TO BE CONSIDERING PLAN.

MAY BUILD A PLANT HERE

Process is Interesting But Also Complicated—Rockford to Have a Plant

There is talk of an artificial ice plant being erected in Janesville during the present fall or next spring to manufacture ice for home consumption. Last winter's open canoes and the same conditions existed elsewhere so that this past summer ice has been up in price. While Janesville has had no regular ice famine, the frozen fluid has been scarce and the local capital which may be interested in the project of artificial ice would try to assure a good supply at a moderate figure for home consumers.

Details of the Process. Artificial ice making as an industry of any size dates back only about fifteen years. A half-century ago the first experiments were recorded, but definite progress was not made until many years thereafter. There are different methods of manufacture. Ice may be formed in cans holding 300 pounds each, which determines the size of the cakes as they are delivered. Again it is formed in plates many times the size of cakes and subsequently sawed into the desired pieces.

Where ice is manufactured by the former process, several hundred cans are placed side by side in rows in a metal tank four feet deep. When the tops of these cans are all on they form a floor. Between the rows of cans, extending from one end of the tank to the other, are ammonia pipes about the size of the pipes in the ammonia solution of brine. This lowers the temperature of the brine. The brine then absorbs the heat of the water within the cans and the freezing follows.

Prior to entering the cans the water is dislled. It first generates into steam in the boilers and is utilized to drive the machinery for condensing ammonia, after which it goes to a purifier and then to a steam condenser. Next it is rebolled and then cooled down to normal temperature in a cooling coil. After this it goes through a charcoal filter and then another filter. It gets into the ice cans at a temperature of 45 degrees. The normal temperature of water is 60 degrees. The brine about the outside of the cans is at a temperature of 16 degrees.

Use of Ammonia. Thus the water has gone from the boilers to the interior of the ice cans. The journey of the ammonia is different. Ammonia is brought into the pipes by means of a pressure from 160 to 180 pounds. From the main pipes it expands through valves into the ammonia tank, extending through the tank between the cans and in the middle of the brine. After expanding into the coils it is pumped through a compressor to the ammonia condenser, where it is condensed back to be used over again. When it reaches the coils it is in liquid form. It expands into gas.

There is no possible way in which ammonia can get into the ice. It would first have to leak from the coils into the brine, and in this case the brine would absorb the ammonia. Besides, the cans are water tight. Also, no chemicals are ever used in the water from which artificial ice is made.

About sixty-four hours are required for the freezing of the water in the case to the point where it becomes ice ready for delivery. When the required time has elapsed, an arrangement for lifting the cans—a sort of crane supported from the ceiling and moved with ease—is attached to the cans; each one in turn, and they are raised from the middle of the brine and the ammonia pipes to the floor formed by the covers of the surrounding cans. Sometimes, where the cakes are smaller than 300 pounds the arrangements provide for the lifting of a number of cans simultaneously. Only one-half of the total number of cans in a big tank is "pulled" in a day, the other half being pulled the following day, so that the process of "pulling" and freezing may be constantly going on.

Making Plate Ice. When a can has been raised and transferred to the thawing tank by means of the traveling crane, it is allowed to remain for a few moments; when the cake loosens from the can and slides down an incline to the storage room. From here it is hauled out to ice wagons for delivery. Modern manufactured ice is beautifully clear and transparent. This beautiful effect can be obtained by eliminating the air from the water before it enters the cans. As soon as the can or row of cans are emptied the work of filling them again with water begins.

In the production of plate ice, large tanks filled with water are surrounded by hollow partitions made of metal plates with pipes between carrying ammonia. The ice freezes out from these plates and the process may require ten or twelve days. The block of ice thus frozen is twelve inches thick and eight feet in width, by fifteen in length. Such a piece weighs several tons. There are three different systems of producing plate ice.

The United States began to realize the value of ice, both for domestic supply and for export, a hundred years ago, and the cutting and shipping of the natural product from rivers and lakes became an important enterprise, especially at Portland, Me., and Boston. The first exports are said to have been made to Martinique in 1856. Later it found its way to New Orleans and other southern cities on our own continent.

"Blatherskite."

New York Tribune: "Blatherskite" is an Americanism, or rather an old word which has survived chiefly in American usage. The way it came to be popular here is curious. It is really the old Scottish "blatherskite," from "blather" to talk nonsense (old Norse "bladr," nonsense and "skate," a term of opprobrium). In the song "Maggie Lauder," written about 1850, occur the words "Jog on your gait, ye blatherskite!" and this song was a very popular one in the American camp during the War of Independence. Hence the vogue of the expressive word, in its Americanized form, "Blatherskite!" was the Irish version early in the nineteenth century.

..Forty Years Ago..

Janesville Daily Gazette, Wednesday, September 19, 1866.—Opening of the Entry Books.—The entry book of the Wisconsin State Agricultural Society will be opened at the Myers House next Saturday afternoon and Monday forenoon. After that at the Secretary's office on the Fair Grounds. All who can should make entries.

In Plattville, the people are moving to secure the location of the Oshkosh and Mississippi railroad through that place. It is proposed to build a road to Calumet to connect with the Mineral Point railroad which will build five miles on the Calumet end, provided Plattville will build the other eleven.

Important and Encouraging from The Rock River Survey.—We have seen a letter from Major Warrel of the Rock River surveying party to H. Richardson, Esq., which gives a most flattering view of the prospects respecting this important matter. The route from Horicon Lake to near Watertown has already been gone over, and the Major pronounces the work entirely feasible. He gives it as his opinion that the best plan to pursue would be to construct a canal from Horicon Lake to Watertown in nearly a direct line as practicable, about twenty-five miles—leaving the bed of the river entirely. This would shorten the route something like fifty miles. He states that Horicon Lake would furnish an abundance of water for all lockage purposes. There is some obstacle to be overcome at Watertown, but when that is surmounted there is nothing in the way of this important work. This is indeed most cheering news.

Another Man Disgusted.—Dr. Treat, who has for many months been one of Johnson and Doolittle's staunchest defenders in this city, has finally become disgusted with these gentlemen and their policy and comes out on their strong. So they go one after another, until there should be none left save a portion of the officeholders.

With Edged Tools

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN Author of "The Sowers," "Rosen's Corner," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1904, by HARPER & BROTHERS

"You need not be afraid to come back now," Jack Meredith went on, with a strange refinement of cruelty. And that was all he ever said about it.

"Will it be convenient for you to meet me on the beach at 4 o'clock this afternoon?" he asked when Durnovo was in the saddle.

"Yes."

"All right, 4 o'clock."

He turned and deliberately went back to the bungalow.

There are some friendships where the intercourse is only the seed which absence duly germinates. Jocelyn Gordon and Jack had parted as acquaintances; they met as friends. There is no gauging the depths of the human mind. There is no getting down to the little bond that lies at the bottom of the well—the bond of sympathy. There is no knowing what it is that prompts us to say, "This man or this woman of all the millions shall be my friend."

"I am sorry," he said, "that he should have had a chance of causing you uneasiness again."

Jocelyn remembered that all her life she remembered still, and Africa had slipped away from her existence forever. It is one of the mental photographs of her memory, standing out clear and strong amid a host of minor recollections.

"I do not believe," she said, "that you know the risks you are running into. Even in the short time that Maurice and I have been here we have learned to treat the climate of western Africa with a proper respect. We have known so many people who have succumbed."

"Yes, but I do not mean to do that. In a way Durnovo's what shall we call it?—lack of nerve is a great safeguard. He will not run into any danger."

"No, but he might run you into it."

"Not a second time, Miss Gordon. Not if we know it. Ourselves mentioned a desire to visit Durnovo's neck. I am afraid he will do it one of these days."

"The mistake that most people make," the girl went on more lightly, "is a want of care. You cannot be too careful, you know, in Africa."

"I am careful, I have reason to be."

She was looking at him steadily, her blue eyes searching his.

"Yes," she said slowly, and there were a thousand questions in the word. "It would be very foolish for me to be otherwise," he said. "I am engaged to be married, and I came out here to make the wherewithal. This expedition is an expedition to seek the wherewithal."

"Yes," she said, "and therefore you must be more careful than any one else, because, you see, your life is something which does not belong to you, but with which you are trusted. I mean if there is anything dangerous to be done let some one else do it. What is she like? What is her name?"

"Her name is Millicent—Millicent Chayne."

"And what is she like?"

He leaned back and, looking at his fingers, stretched his arms out with the palms of his hands outward, a habit of his when asked a question needing consideration.

"She is of medium height. Her hair is brown. Her worst enemy admits, I believe, that she is pretty. Of course I am convinced of it."

"Of course," replied Jocelyn steadily. "That is as it should be. And I have no doubt that you and her worst enemy are both quite right."

CHAPTER XIII.

RUMOR met Maurice Gordon almost at the outset of his journey northward. "Smallpox is raging on the Ogowe river," they told him. "The English expedition is stricken down with it. The three leaders are dead."

Maurice Gordon had not lived four years on the west-African coast in vain. He took this for what it was worth. But if he had acquired skepticism he had lost his nerve. He put about and sailed back to Loango.

"I wonder," he muttered as he walked up from the beach to his office that same afternoon—"I wonder if Durnovo is among them."

And he was conscious of a ray of hope in his mind. It was a kind-hearted man in his way, this Maurice Gordon of Loango, but he could not disguise from himself the simple fact that the death of Victor Durnovo would be a distinct convenience and a most desirable relief.

Thinking these thoughts, Maurice Gordon arrived at the factory and went straight to his own office, where he found the object of them, Victor Durnovo, sitting in consumption of the office sherry.

Gordon saw at once that the rumor was true. There was a hunched, unwholesome look in Durnovo's eyes. He looked shaken and failed to convey a suggestion of personal dignity.

"Hello!" exclaimed the proprietor of the decanter. "You look a bit chippy. I've heard you've got smallpox up at Masala."

"So have I. I've just heard it from Meredith."

"Just heard it? Is Meredith down here too?"

"Yes, and the fool wants to go back tonight. I have to meet him on the beach at 4 o'clock."

Maurice Gordon sat down, poured out for himself a glass of sherry and

The black eyes seemed to probe the good natured, sensual face of Maurice Gordon, so keen, so searching was their glance.

"And I would be willing to do it, to make that man's fortune, provided that he was my brother-in-law."

"What the devil do you mean?" asked Gordon, setting down the glass that was half raised to his lips.

"I mean that I want to marry Jocelyn."

And the modern school of realistic, mawkishly foul novelists, who hold

"Besides," he said, "I may succeed with one of them."

that love exorcism all would have taken delight in the passionate rendering of the girl's name.

"Want to marry Jocelyn, do you?" answered Maurice, with a devious little laugh. "On the first impulse of the moment he gave no thought to himself or his own interests and spoke with undisguised contempt. He might have been speaking to a beggar on the roadside."

Durnovo's eyes flashed dangerously and his tobacco-stained teeth clinched for a moment over his lower lip.

"That is my desire and intention."

"Look here, Durnovo," exclaimed Gordon, "don't be a fool. Can't you see that it is quite out of the question?"

"No," he said, "I can't see that it is out of the question. On the contrary, it seems only natural that she should marry the man who is her brother's partner in many a little speculation."

Maurice Gordon, sitting there staring hopelessly into the hair-bred's face, saw it all. He went back in a flash of recollection to many passing details which had been unnoted at the time; details which now fitted into each other like links of a chain, and that chain was around him. He leaped forward in a momentary opening of the future and saw himself married, disgraced, held up to the execration of the whole civilized world. He was utterly in this man's power, bound hand and foot. He could not say no to this demand, which had roused all the latent chivalry, gentlemanliness, brotherly love that was in him. Maurice Gordon knew that Victor Durnovo possessed knowledge which Jocelyn would not since cheap at the price of her person.

"I don't think," said Durnovo, who seemed to be following Gordon's thoughts, "that the idea will be so repellent to your sister as you seem to think."

And a sudden ray of hope shot toward the future into which his sister was starting. It might be so. One can never tell with women.

"I don't want you to do anything now," he went on more gently. "It was wonderful how well he knew Maurice Gordon. The suggested delay appealed to one side of his nature, the softened tone to another. "There is time enough. When I come back I will speak of it again. Your sister is very fond of you, and I think I have one or two arguments to put forward which she would recognize as uncommonly strong. I would not bring forward those arguments except as a last resource. I would first point out the advantages. A fourth share in the simian scheme would make you a rich man—above suspicion—independent of the caprice of the market place."

Maurice Gordon winced visibly, and his eyes wandered as if he were about to give way to panic.

"You could retire and go home to England—to a cooler climate. This country might get too hot for your constitution. See?"

Durnovo came back into the center of the room and stood by the writing table. His attitude was that of a man holding a whip over a cowering dog.

He took up his hat and riding whip with a satisfied little laugh, as if the dog had originally done his bidding.

"Besides," he said, with a certain defiance of manner, "I may succeed without any of that—eh?"

"Yes," Gordon was obliged to admit, with a gulp, as if he were swallowing his pride. And he knew that in saying the word he was degrading his sister—throwing her at this man's feet as the price of his own honor.

"With a half contemptuous nod, Victor Durnovo turned and went away to keep his appointment with Meredith."

Guy Oscar was sitting on the natural terrace in front of Durnovo's house at Masala, and Marie attended to his simple wants with that patient dignity which suggested the recollection of better times, and appealed strongly to the manhood of her fellow servant Joseph and her willow master.

"I hear the sound of paddles," she said.

"My ears are not so sharp as yours," said Oscar.

S.S.S. HEALS OLD SORES

Every old sore exists because of a polluted condition of the blood. This vital fluid is infected with some germ or old taint, or perhaps has been left in an unhealthy condition from a long spell of sickness, or the trouble may be inherited. The poisonous germs and matter with which the blood is saturated force an outlet on the face, arms, legs or other part of the body and form a sore or ulcer. This being continually fed by a polluted blood supply, grows red and angry, festers and eats into the surrounding flesh until it becomes what is very aptly termed an "old sore." The relief produced by external treatment is only temporary. The only treatment that can do any real good is a blood purifier that goes to the very root of the trouble and, removing the cause, and for this purpose nothing equals S.S.S. It drives out from the circulation all morbid matter and germs, even reaching down to hereditary taints, and by cleansing the blood heals old sores permanently. S.S.S. not only removes all taints and poisons from the blood but builds it up by supplying it with the rich, health-sustaining properties it needs to keep the system in health. S.S.S. makes pure blood and a sore must heal if the blood is pure and healthy. Book on Sores and Ulcers and medical advice free.

LITTLE HEADWAY MADE FOR PEACE

CUBAN INSURGENTS DEMAND RELEASE OF PRISONERS.

WAIT FOR TAFT TO ACT

American Secretary of War Is Dependent Upon to Straighten Out the Political Tangle That Exists on the Island.

Havana, Sept. 18.—Notwithstanding some appearance of peace, no decisive progress was made Tuesday in the peace negotiations.

A few peace makers went westward in automobiles with the idea of reaching and conferring with Pino Guerrero, the insurgent leader in Pinar del Rio province, and others visited Loya del Castillo, the commander of the insurgent forces in Havana province; but the only definite thing reported is that the insurgents in the field are not willing to enter on negotiations until all the conspiracy prisoners shall have been released.

While it is possible that these most highly responsible may reach a basis of agreement in time to present it to Secretary of War Taft and Assistant Secretary of State Bacon when they land here, there is nothing to show that such a basis has been reached as yet and there is every evidence that it has been reached, it will not be accepted by the insurgent following.

Dependence on Americans. Considerable earnestness has been shown by some of the leaders looking towards a settlement upon acceptable terms, but others, and notably so among the moderates, appear to be satisfied to let the case rest as it is until it can be adjudicated by President Roosevelt's representatives.

The liberals are more anxious to place themselves in a position which may be considered at least equally as strong as that of the government and consequently they are more persistently active.

Menocal's Mission Ended. Gen. Menocal, the chief of the veterans' peace commission, stated that the important part of his mission was ended when he brought the leaders together. The liberals feel that they accomplished something in procuring the release of the alleged conspirators more recently arrested and in inducing a cessation of hostilities. Some of their leaders also remark on the fact that the cessation of hostilities was the act of the government.

While no acceptable basis of peace appears to have been suggested by either side, the impression is general that Secretary Taft will take up the work of peacemaking with small consideration for past grievances, the main idea being rather constructive measures for the future.

Search Homes of Americans. The newest feature of the revolution is the appearance of Americans from the Isle of Pines complaining that officials of the courts of the Isle of Pines are searching the homes of all Americans for firearms and seizing all arms, which may be found.

The Americans there, both radicals and conservatives, are extremely wrathful over the action of these officials, especially so as the conduct of some of the natives lately had caused them to consider the necessity of having firearms within reach. They will appeal to Minister Morgan and Assistant Secretary of State Bacon with a request that a United States naval vessel be sent to the Isle of Pines to safeguard the lives and properties of Americans.

LABOR A POLITICAL FACTOR

FEDERATION IS TO CONTINUE ITS ACTIVITY.

Executive Council Announces No Money Contributions Were Accepted from Any Candidate.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor Tuesday adopted the report of the labor representation committee regarding its participation in the political campaign and in that connection adopted the following resolution:

"The committee is authorized and directed to continue the campaign to its conclusion for the attainment of the largest degree of success in the interest for the protection and promotion of the rights and liberty of working people and the people generally. And to the attainment of these laudable purposes, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor calls upon all reform forces and public-spirited citizens, who sympathize with the effort to reestablish justice and right in the affairs of our country, to cooperate with our movement, our cause and campaign."

The committee consists of President Gompers, Vice President O'Connell and Secretary Morrison of the federation. The council announced that no money had been accepted by the federation from any candidate for office on any ticket, and it was decided to pursue this course in the future.

The council directed Mr. Gompers to appear before the house committee on post offices when it meets next month to consider changes in the postal rates and to protest against any change "which would affect the rights to which the trade union with other publications are now entitled."

ENGLISH SUITS NOT WORN MUCH

LONDON-CUT STUFF IMPORTED IN SMALL QUANTITIES.

PACKERS ARE FORGOTTEN

Sensational "Disclosures" No Longer Startle—Cuba May Be Annexed.

(By William Wolf Smith.) Washington, D. C., Sept. 17.—(Special Correspondence.)—There is a ripple of laughter going the rounds of the army officers in this city that threatens to grow into a state of the most ardent hilarity, and extend to others than those who wear the uniform of our Uncle Sam. It is all over a recent bulletin issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor. It will be remembered that a few months ago Secretary Taft imported, indirect violation of the immigration laws, a tailor from London, to design, cut, and construct a uniform for our American army. At that time the press of the country ridiculed the idea of our having to go to England for such a purpose, and the tailors of this country threatened to rise in rebellion.

At the time our war secretary ordered his tailor from Tooley street the tailors of London set up the claim that all "Americans who prize style, quality and fit order their clothes" from London tailors. That was a pretty broad statement; for it has long been acknowledged that Americans as a rule are the best dressed people in the world, and that more Americans can afford, and do get the very best there is in the market. Now comes our Department of Commerce and Labor and tells us for the year 1905 the total exports of clothing from England to the United States only amounted to a beggarly $275,000, and worse and more of it, by a good deal the same department assures us that it has been the custom of British officials to enter exports of clothing to the United States under the head of "slops." Isn't that a sweet morsel for our few Anglo-maniacs, who have been boasting of their "London cut" clothes? If there is any fit or style about them it is cruel in the British treasury officials to determine them "slops," but as the aforesaid treasury officials are supposed to know, we must not find fault with them for the value they place on London made clothing. The army officials are quietly enjoying this unintentional dig of the Department of Commerce and Labor, at the secretary of war, who is trying to have "slop" uniforms for the boys we send out to do battle.

In grave, honest truth, our army uniforms have been going from bad to worse for several years. The blue uniforms, of the days from 1861 to 1865, was the nastiest ever put on by soldiers of this or any other country. It is true that times the fit was not all that could be desired, but the style was attractive, and something to be proud of. In these days it is hard to tell a soldier from a tramp, who had pilfered the grab of some scarecrow in a cornfield, and the impression prevails that when the boys are called upon to don the uniforms designed and built under Taft's London importation not a tramp in the country would trade clothing with our soldiers.

The Department of Commerce and Labor is doing much admirable work in trying to call attention of American manufacturers to their faulty methods in packing their products for the export trade. In a recent bulletin the warning note is again sounded after this fashion: "Years ago, and yearly thereafter, consular and departmental trade reports have called the attention of exporters to this vital point. It seems strange that so practical a people in all other branches of trade should devote so much time and scientific labor to the production of the most advanced, manufactures, in many cases more or less fragile, and after much achievement turn over to packing, to some 'handy man' the products to the most scientific force in the factory or warehouse. What particular ceremony is fulfilled in dumping wares, which have been so scientifically produced, in crates, bales, boxes, and barrels and consigning them to transportation companies to be tossed about and broken up in the rough handling to which all exported goods are subjected it would be difficult to say. It is full time that our manufacturers awake to the fact that for export all their time and labor are more than wasted if the products do not reach their destination in good condition."

The one great want of America is a market for the over-products of our factories; the evidence is that our producers will not pay attention to the demands that the packing be done in a proper manner. A few years ago a large importing firm in South America came to this country with an order aggregating more than half a million dollars. To reach their final destination the good had to be packed in bales that could be carried on mule back over the mountains. The American manufacturer insisted in putting the good in large boxes, that could be transported only by car or boat. Of course the other went to England, and the United States lost a very valuable trade.

The American manufacturer insisted in putting the good in large boxes, that could be transported only by car or boat. Of course the other went to England, and the United States lost a very valuable trade.
